URUGUAY LODGE

After an intensive restoration process this hundred- year old mansion has been returned to it's original splendor, and updated with the modern comforts you would expect from David Denies Bird Hunting. Six grand bedrooms will accommodate up to 8 hunters in comfortable king size beds.

There are fertile fields in abundance with good pastures to hunt perdiz with our great dogs; wide plots dedicated to agriculture for growing sunflowers, sorghum, soy, corn and wheat providing an infinite amount of food for the doves.

Our aim is to keep the same high level of service as we offer throughout our portfolio of world class lodges, so that once every single detail is looked after by us, you can only concentrate on what matters most: GREAT MIXED BAG HUNTING.

THE HUNTING

- Our typical program calls for multiple specie hunts almost every day of your stay. Most days feature hunts for two species-and other days you'll have three different hunts on the menu (having 3 hunts in one day is optional, of course).
- Our dove shoots typically take place in some of the biggest roosts in Uruguay, very close to our lodges (10 to 15 minutes' drive), and there are ample opportunities for hot-barrel shooting. Your bird boys will be at your side throughout the shoot, providing you with cartridges, refreshment as needed, and keeping an eye out for birds.
- Perdiz hunts in Uruguay are typically two to three hour hunts through short cover and on flat ground. Hunters will go to the field in pairs, accompanied by a guide/dog handler. You will follow the dogs until they make game, and then walk to the point for the flush of the partridge. After one field has been covered, you typically make a very short drive to another, and will repeat the process with a fresh dog until the perdiz limit has been achieved.
- For those who have not been Pigeon hunting, think of it as a dry land duck hunt, with hunters in a hide near a spread of decoys, typically in an agricultural field. Pigeon shooting can be fast and furious, with birds coming to the decoys in singles and small groups, and many times you will see the birds well in the distance as they cross an open expanse to get to your decoys. They are very decoy-friendly birds, but they are sharp-eyed and it is vital to stay well-hidden to enjoy success.
